OF HARTFORD, CONN.
THE ÆTNA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY
Grew out of the Old Ætna Fire Insurance Company, having been first organized as a branch of that Company. The Life Fund was afterward separated from the Fire Fund, with the same Stockholders as before. In 1861 the Mutual was combined with the Stock plan; by this combination the insured secure all the benefits of a Mutual Co., and the additional security which a safely invested capital affords. Since that time the ÆTNA has enjoyed unusual prosperity, and increased its business to an unprecedented extent. The energy and enterprise which have characterized its operations are best indicated by the following figures:—
The Receipts for the Year 1863 were $201.454 67.
The Receipts for the Year 1864 were 694.827 53.
The Receipts for the Year 1865 were 1.683.039 57.
The number of Policies issued during the year 1865 was 8819.

Life Plan and the Endowment Plan, also the
TEN-YEAR NON-FORFEITING POLICIES,
TEN-YEAR NON-FORFEITING ENDOWMENT POLICIES.

A New Freedmen's Bureau Bill—Secretary Seward on the Mexican Question.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21

The Commercial says—

The money market sympathizes slightly with the movement in gold. The Sub-Treasury Saturday and yesterday sold about $5,000,000 of gold at 137¼, which temporarily takes nearly $7,000,000 in currency into the Sub-Treasury, and so far diminishes the supply of money for loans. All demands in the street are met at 6 per cent. The chief purchasers of gold were foreign Bankers. The bear interest still predominates in the stock market.

Governments continues in steady demand.

The improvement in 5-20's at London, reported by the last steamers, has no effect here, the decline in gold being more than an offset.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company has issued a circular notifying agents that in consequence of the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty, they have decided in the meantime to give preference to shipment to all freight for the United States.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.

The Tribune's special Washington despatch says:

General Terry has testified before the Reconstruction Committee, and left for Richmond.

It is stated that Mr. Doolittle, of Wisconsin, will introduce a new Freedmen's Bureau Bill to-day, incorporating the President's features.

The Heralds despatch says:

The reply of Secretary Seward to Mr. Bigelow's despatch enclosing the speech of the Emperor Napoleon in reference to Mexican affairs, will be forwarded to Europe to-day. It emphatically denies the assertion of the Emperor that our government had been invited to join France in her Mexican intervention before the introduction of French forces into Maximilian's army.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.

The steamer Henry Chauncey, from Aspinwall 13th, has arrived.

Several miners have arrived at Panama en route to prospect the gold mines of Clioco and Barbacous, some forty miles from Turaco.

A rich gold region is reported just discovered about eighteen miles from Panama, and two miles from the railroad. California miners pronounce the developments exceedingly rich.

The blockade of Calderas had been raised, and the Spanish squadron had concentrated at Valparaiso. Five or six sailing vessels had been burned by the Spaniards.

The Chilian coast is now open to trade. Several vessels from Europe had been warned away from Valparaiso, and had gone to other ports.

NASHVILLE, Feb. 21.

The Speaker of the Tennessee House has ordered absenting members to be brought in by force, if they will not come voluntarily.

The session to-day was stormy. An angry discussion was caused by the compelled attendance of several members of the conservative party, who, it is alleged, staid away to prevent the House having a quorum.

It was reported in the House to-day, that Col. Shaffer, commander at this post, would, if the absence of members continued, use military force to compel attendance.

AUGUSTA, Feb. 21.

The Legislative Investigation Committee, on alleged frauds in enlistments have reported that after the fullest investigation they have been enabled to make into the matter of enlistments and credits to towns, they are fully satisfied that the evidence before them does not tend to implicate any officer of the State in any transactions in connection with enlistments or credits to the State, inconsistent with his official duty.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 21.

The democratic members of the Ohio Legislature held a caucus to-night, and endorsed the President's veto message.

TRICHINIASIS. The new disease called Trichiniasis, which has caused so much excitement and consternation in Germany, is produced by a minute worm introduced into the system from the eating of pork infested with this parasite. The order Nematoides, to which this worm belongs, should interest the physician, as it includes nearly all the internal parasites of the human subject. The various species occur in different parts of the body; thus, one species confined to the inhabitants of tropical Asia and Africa, is found in the lower extremities just beneath the skin.

Three species have been found in the eye. Another species has been detected in the enlarged bronchial tubes of a man. The bladder has been found to contain a species.—Still another species, fortunately very rare, has been found in the human kidney, where it often produces suppuration and absorption of that organ. This species is not confined to the human subject, but is found in the dog and several other animals.

The round worm, so common with children, belongs to this group. The Trichina spiralis, which causes the disease named at the head of this article, was first described by Prof. Richard Owen of England in the year 1835, though the peculiar appearance of the flesh containing these worms was noticed in 1833. Each of these worms is enclosed in a cell or cyst about 1-50 inch in length.—These cysts are easily detected by compressing a very thin slice of the infected muscle between two pieces of glass. A longitudinal section of the muscle is necessary, as the cysts lie in that direction. These cysts are elliptical in shape and opaque, the central portion, however, being translucent enough to show the coiled worm within. This worm, when uncoiled, is about 1-30 inch in length.

Little is known regarding their development. We only know that they are introduced into the body by eating pork infested with them. The tenacity of life possessed by allied species, and probably by Trichina also, is very remarkable and should be known, since a knowledge of this property is necessary to those who would guard against them.

One species was immersed in turpentine three weeks, and yet brought forth living ova! Another species, common to the codfish, survived, after being subjected to boiling water for one hour. A species peculiar to the herring was found alive in herring which had been frozen and packed in ice.—It is obvious, then, that hasty cooking or smoking of pork will in no wise affect the vitality of the worm in question. What shall we say of those who habitually eat raw bacon and pork, or underdone sausage? "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and if we cannot cook our pork properly we had better do without it.—Cor. Press.

THE PRESIDENT SERENADED BY COPPERHEADS. A notice that the President would be serenaded by those who appreciated his devotion to the Union and the Constitution drew together a big crowd at Willard's Hotel. A majority of them were old Democrats, many of whom have been in the rebel army, or in the departments at Richmond.

After some music by the band in front of Willard's, speeches were made by Judge Hughes, Representatives Voorhees and Green Clay Smith, after which a procession was formed, marshaled by Council Whitley, the correspondent of the Richmond Enquirer, and marching to the White House. The band played and the crowd cheered, but Mr. Johnson could not be induced to speak or even show himself. The crowd then visited Mr. Seward who indulged in some vague remarks about peace, but did not allude to the vote.

Such a gathering of Copperheads has not been witnessed here since the spring of 1861.—[Sp. to Boston Journal.

While before the Reconstruction Committee on Saturday, in response to an inquiry as to whether a jury could be empannelled in Virginia for an impartial trial of Jeff Davis, Gen. Lee said that he thought not, as scarcely a man summoned as a juror could bring in a verdict of guilty of treason without feeling that he, as a party to the same crime, could be held equally liable. This does not accord with the statements of members of the Virginia delegation made before the same committee last week.

PHARAOH'S SERPENT.—Our attention has been called to this new chemical toy, from which is hatched amid fumes and gases what is called 'Pharaoh's Serpents.' The Boston Medical and Surgical Journal described the composition of these eggs, and says they are of poisonous nature.

"The substances contained in them cannot be mixed with the air of a room without injurious consequences to the person breathing it. The facts that serious results do not follow their use, is said to be that being expensive they are burned singly; though that Journal asserts that inspired even in minute quantity substances must be prejudicial to health, and that when set free by combustion in larger amounts, in a small room, they may produce even a dangerous effect. If people wish to play with such toys, it is suggested that they observe the precautions practiced under similar circumstances in chemical laboratories, of thoroughly ventilating the room.

—A call is out for a mass convention in Tennessee to demonstrate the perfect fitness of that State for immediate re-admission.—It is signed by 10 members of the Legislature. Eight of them voted against the bill to allow negro testimony in the Courts. One of them, in a speech last week, described the Congress of the United States as a "band of infamous and traitorous scoundrels, headed by Sumner and Stevens." When such men say Tennessee ought to be admitted, who will venture to say she ought not?—[N. Y. Tribune.

—Our readers will remember that we recently copied from the Bath Times an account of the shooting of James Fernandez, a notorious South Carolina desperado, by a soldier of the 15th Maine. A correspondent of the Times says that the chivalry have retaliated. Seven armed men, at midnight, proceeded to the negro quarters of the house where Fernandez was killed, and breaking down the door, murdered three innocent negroes,—one of them a woman, after which the valiant party made a hasty retreat.—Lewiston Journal.

MUTTY'S
Friction Feed Roller,
FOR CIRCULAR SAWS.
PATENTED JANUARY 23d, 1866.
THIS INVENTION is applicable to all Circular Saws provided with stationary tables and used for re-sawing lumber.
It reduces the labor of sawing one-half, and fifty per cent. more lumber can be sawed with, than without its use. It is applied without change of existing machinery; is not liable to get out of repair, and not expensive to apply.
It has been in practical use on the Penobscot river for one year, where the above facts have been fully and satisfactorily demonstrated, as is shown by the certificates of master mill-men, machinists, owners and operators of mills appended hereto.
The undersigned have for the past season witnessed the practical use of MUTTY'S FEED ROLLER in re-sawing lumber, and we cheerfully recommend it as a practical, economical, and labor saving invention, destined to come into general use in all cases where lumber is re-sawed upon stationary tables. We are fully satisfied from our own observation that the saving effected, and extra amount cut, by its use, is fully as large as the estimate above given.

CONSPIRACY TO INJURE THE FINANCES OF THE UNITED STATES.—The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger says, the State Department has positive evidence of the existence of a widely-extended conspiracy in Canada and Europe, designed to injuriously affect the finances of the United States Government. The intention is to use all available means to create a panic in European markets in regard to American securities, and as a consequence to force some our bonds held abroad. The hope seems to be cherished by the conspirators that they may, in this way, bring about a financial crisis in the United States, and prostrate the commercial interests of the country. The principal Canadian Agent is an individual named Vernow, and the first movement towards the contemplated results, exhibits itself in a work, the proof sheets of which are in possession of the Department. The tenor of this work may be inferred from its title-page, which is as follows:

"Repudiation of the National Debt Inevitable—Impossible to pay the Interest and Support the Government—The Farmer, Artisan and Laborer slaves to Shoddy and Wall street."

It appears that this Vernow is in correspondence with the Rothschilds on the subject, and the other leading European banking houses are implicated in the plot. It also appears that the conspirators have opened correspondence with Earl Russell and the London Times, with Hope & Co., at Amsterdam, and the Paris Journals. Of the intention on the part of the plotters to destroy the credit of the Government, the evidence is full and complete;—but we think they will find it a harder job than they imagine.

THE PRESIDENT'S VETO. The Boston Daily Advertiser has the following remarks—moderate and kind in tone, but fixed and firm in opinion:

We lay before our readers this morning the unwelcome intelligence that the President yesterday vetoed the Freedmen's Bureau bill. The hour at which we receive the veto is too late to permit us to examine the grounds on which it is rested, or to consider fully the attitude which Mr. Johnson has assumed towards the majority in each house of Congress. It is sufficient to say for the present that instead of involving objections merely to certain points of detail, as to which adjustment might not be difficult, the veto appears to proceed upon general considerations, as to which the judgment of Congress is probably as well fixed as the President's.

The grave character of the issue thus suddenly joined between the legislative and executive branches of our government will not escape the attention of our readers. It is an issue which it was worth much serious effort to avoid, not for the interests of party, which are temporary and inconsiderable, but for the sake of national interests which are momentous and eternal. But if it has indeed come, we know not how Congress can decline to meet it openly and firmly, relying upon the certain support of the great majority of the American people, in a steadfast adherence to the course marked out alike by self-respect and by the demands of public safety.

The vote in the Senate upon passing the Freedmen's Bureau Bill over the President's veto was 30 yeas to 18 nays, absent two,—not a two-thirds vote. The negative vote was thrown by ten democrats and the following who have heretofore been classed as Union men—Dixon of Connecticut, Norton of Minnesota, Stewart of Nevada, Morgan of New York, Cowan of Pennsylvania, Van Winkle and Willey of West Virginia, and Doolittle of Wisconsin. The absentees were Messrs. Foote of Vt., (Union) and Wright of N. J., (Dem.) Mr. Willey said he did not endorse the sentiments of the message—but voted against the bill because he deemed it unconstitutional to expend money for the Freedmen!

A Day with the Freedmen.

POPLAR SPRINGS, Feb. 8.

Quite early this morning, before I had arisen from the breakfast table, there were several knocks at my door, by people of whom it was almost literally true that they had "Nothing to wear."

Good human creatures, too, made of the same kind of clay as you, Miss Flora McFlimsey, with the same capacities for suffering and enjoyment, and, according to their conditions, just as anxious to make a good appearance in the world.

My little waiting maid, Lucy, but several of them off with information that "Miss Charlotte was at breakfast," but one, more importunate than the rest, pressed her claims so resolutely that Lucy was obliged to succumb. By this time, having finished my breakfast, I went to the door, and found an aged woman, who, I afterwards learned, rejoiced in the aristocratic name of Isabella Pegram. She was of low stature, her garments clean and tidy, though made up of patches in which white predominated, the blue cape of a military coat buttoned around her shoulders, with its bright, brass buttons, a close hood, made of some dark material, drawn tightly down over her withered features, and a heavy walking stick in her hand.

"Good morning, Aunt."

"Only tol'able, thank you, missus, how is yourself?"

"Quite well, I thank you; what do you wish for?"

"I's a lady that's never been to see you before, and I wants, if you please ma'am, to get some clothes for myself, and my three little gran'children. They's motherless chillun, and has nobody to take care of 'em but me."

"How far have you walked this morning, Aunt?"

"Three miles, missus."

"Then you must be tired; come in and rest a little."

"'Deed, missus, I'se mighty tired, and painified in my limbs, too," and declining the proffered chair, she seats herself humbly on the hearth, in my chimney corner.

"How old are you, Aunty?"

"I don't know, missus, how old I is, but I knows I isn't young, 'cause I has so many old folks pains."

"You ought not to be out this cold morning, with your painified limbs."

"Pears like it's been mighty cold ever since Christmas, but we couldn't spect anything else, 'cause it was such pious weather all afore Christmas, and what can't be holp must be enjured."

I was now ready to go to the store room, whither I was followed by the retinue that had been waiting around the door, all wishing "to draw," and from whence I had scarcely dismissed Isabella, with a big bundle of such articles as I thought adapted to her wants, when a woman of Amazonian proportions pressed through the crowd.

"Here's I, missus. I'se the lady that spoke to you last night, and you promised me some things for myself and my two gran'chillun. I walked yesterday, from crack o'day till sun-down, ten miles, to come to you, 'cause I heard you had some things to give to we, all. This coat as I has on I borrowed from a neighbor, and my little gran'chillun is a 'most stark naked. I'se done men', an' men', an' men', an' men'.—I'se got to walk back to-day, so please m'am, discharge me as soon as you can. Here's my ticket." Saying which, she held out a bit of paper, on which was neatly written in a lady's hand, "Judy Green—sixty years old. Has been the mother of seventeen children. Has had her right arm broken."

Having "discharged" Judy, with a bundle as large as she was able to carry, and for which she was very grateful, assuring me that she would come and see me again when the walking gets better, I attend the others, and after due inquiry into the circumstances, make up a bundle for each of such articles as they seem most to require. Some receive the gifts as a matter of course, while others almost dance for joy at the sight of the warm garments, taxing their vocabulary to the utmost for words to express the gratitude to me, and the kind donors at the North, whom they "does love," and saving as they turn away with their faces all aglow, "I'll fetch you some more eggs, Miss Charlotte," or, "My husband says he'll kill you some more ol' hares," hares being plenty at this season.

Among the applicants are Rachel Harper, who has been the mother of eighteen children, six of whom are living with her, asking government rations this morning for the first time, as the leaden balls are "getting scace," and Mary Perham, a widow with eight children, for five of whom she draws rations, and "has to scuffle for the rest."

Ann Brown, whose noble determination not to "bother the Government" was spoken of in a previous letter, has come to ask for something in which to shroud her little girl, (the last of eight children) who died last night. In reply to my few words of condolence she says, quietly, "She said just before she died, 'I'm going home to rest. Don't cry when I'm gone, Mammy.'"

One woman wants a "dost of castor oil," for her sick child, and as I take down the bottle from the shelf she presents a small glass inkstand, with a little side spout.

"This is a very inconvenient vessel to take it in; why didn't you bring a cup?"

"Hadn't any."

"What have you besides this?"

"Only a small chance of old tin cans, and a spoon."

After the crowd has subsided a little, a nice looking quadroon boy comes to ask for shoes. I allow him to come in and try some second hand boots, and he fits himself to a pair which make his handsome eyes shine. In the meantime he tells his story: "Was raised in North Carolina." Was in the rebel army during the first two years of the war, waiting on his master; then was taken into the Union army, and waited on federal officers. Now is working with his uncle near here.

"What is your name?"

"John Richards my Sunday name; my every day name, John Alls."

Thus passed the morning, and I had just returned to my log cabin, when an Irish woman, whom I had known in Petersburg last summer, came in. I was familiar with her story. Her husband was an industrious, hard working man, and having his wife and five little children to support, had avoided going into the rebel army. To do this, he had sometimes been obliged to absent himself from his family, and remain in concealment for a month at a time.

One evening last winter his wife being out of the house, and he having just been up stairs to put his little ones in bed, three rebel soldiers came into the yard, and called him outside. The moment he appeared they all three discharged their muskets at him, and fell. He had life enough left to crawl into the house. "When I came home," she said, "I found him lying dead across the hearth, and Christmas day I buried him." The shock broke her heart; but she must still struggle to get bread for her children! "Och, Mavourneen," she said, as she sat down, wiping away the tears, "an' it's hardships has driven me out to ye! I nivir tho't I could be so poor, or see such hard times as I have seen since ye went away. They stole me mule that was earning me three dollars a day, then they stole me pigs, and me hens, and then I laid down sick and I thought sure I was about to die. If it hadn't been for the money ye gave me when ye went away, we'd all a' perished. Sure that was the dearest ten dollars I ever had in me life, may the Lord Almighty bless ye."

"I am very glad the money was useful to you, but your gratitude is due to friends at the North, who pitied your condition and sent the money for your relief."

"Sure the people of the North is kind. I wish I was at the North. Here, they all look strange upon me—I've been in the country now five years, and I know nobody."

I gave her a bundle of such articles as I had at hand for her children, and she left for her return walk of four miles, encouraged by the promise of help hereafter.

Late in the afternoon Sylvia Oliver comes in to ask me to write a letter to her "old master," from whom she has been absent only a few weeks. So I open my desk and sit down to write while she dictates. "Tell him it took all the money I had to come to Petersburg; and so I could not go any farther, and since I came here I have heard my mother is dead. Tell him I would not have left him only I was so anxious to see my mother. Tell him if he will send me money to come back with, I will try to be a faithful servant. I will try to make it up to him. Tell him I had rather live with him and Miss Ann than any one else."

As this is the first instance that has come within my observation, where a slave wished to return to the old master, I think it worth recording.

Sylvia is intelligent, quiet and womanly in manner, loveable and grateful in disposition. The desire to return is creditable both to herself and her master, to whom she is sincerely attached, and whom she regrets ever having left.

AUGUSTA, Feb. 21.

At a caucus of the Union members of the Legislature this evening, the following resolution, offered by the Hon. Lewis Barker of the Senate, was adopted—

Resolved, That this Legislature cordially approves and endorses the action of the Senators of this State in voting to pass the Freedmen's bureau bill, notwithstanding the President's veto, as being in accordance with the sentiments of their constituents, and the principles upon the support of which alone the government can be sustained.

Mr. Stevens of the House submitted the following resolution, which was adopted—

Resolved, That in the Union members of Congress this Legislature recognizes a noble array of tried defenders of the principles of constitutional liberty, and reposes with confidence in their wisdom and patriotism for the settlement of questions appropriately pertaining to the legislative department of the government.

The caucus voted that these resolutions be submitted by their authors to the Legislature to-morrow, and that no other resolution was to be introduced.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 21.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.

Representative Julian, chairman of the House committee on public lands, to-day reported from that committee a very important bill, providing for the sale by auction of the gold and silver lands of the United States. None but citizens of the United States, or those who have declared their intention to become such, shall be allowed to purchase, and all lands remaining unsold after the public sales shall be open to private entry. Among the provisions of the bill is one that the discoverer or worker of any mine shall have the right to purchase it at the minimum price fixed upon it—the price to be fixed by the register, receiver, and geologist. One of the latter is to be appointed for each land district. No person shall purchase more than 20 acres, nor enter a second tract without selling the first at public sale to the highest bidder in cash. The proceeds of the sale of the lands shall be applied to payment of the principal and interest of the bonds of the United States.

Thirty-Ninth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.

Senate.

The joint resolution to furnish vessels to the telegraph expedition under Col. Buckley to Russia was passed.

Mr. Fessenden moved that the regular order, which was the constitutional amendment in relation to representation, be postponed, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the concurrent resolution of the House, provide that until Congress so decide, no Senators or Representatives from the lately rebellious States be admitted to the halls Congress.

This gave rise to some discussion which ended in the concurrent resolution being read the first time.

The second reading was objected to by Dixon.

The constitutional amendment was then taken up.

Mr. Buckalow opposed it.

Mr. Wilson offered a resolution recognizing the valor and endurance of the officers, soldiers and seamen of the United States.

Referred.

Mr. Lane, of Kansas, gave notice that he would introduce a bill on Friday to continue in force existing freedmen's bureau.

Mr. Buckalow animadverted upon New England as possessing too great a voice in the South. He favored an amendment to the Constitution readjusting Senatorial representation, States having less than one million inhabitants to have one Senator, States with more than one million and less than three millions inhabitants, two Senators, and States with more than three millions inhabitants, three Senators.

Mr. Wilson replied briefly to Mr. Buckalow's strictures upon New England's prominence in the Senate.

Mr. Nye took the floor upon the pending question, but gave way to a motion to go into executive session.

Adjourned until Friday.

House

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was passed yesterday, that no Senator or Representative shall be admitted to Congress until Congress declares such States entitled to representation, was lost by a vote of 108 to 37.

The election case was postponed.

The loan bill was then taken up.

Mr. Morrill spoke in favor of the bill.

Mr. Stevens opposed the bill and offered an amendment striking out the discretionary powers of the Secretary power of the Secretary of the Treasury, and also the foreign loan clause. He intended, he said, to offer a bill in this form as a substitute for the original bill.

Mr. Hooper argued against any reduction of the currency, and said that when the Treasury resumed specie payment, which it could do without regard to the banks, the United States could be continued in circulation as the equivalent of coin, until there was sufficient amount of coin in the country to supply their places.

Mr. Kelly argued against the redemption of non-interest bearing notes, or any contraction of the currency.

The further consideration of the loan bill was postponed until Wednesday.

Adjourned until Friday.

State vs. Stephen Kimball. Verdict, not guilty of adultery, but guilty of fornication. Sentence—60 days in county jail and fine of $100. Committed.

State vs. Frank Weddington. Larceny of horse belonging to H. F. Wallace, Oldtown. Deft pleads guilty.

State vs. George W. Allen. Larceny from S. B. Fifield, Bangor. Deft pleads guilty. Fine $300—paid.

State vs. George H. Leighton. Larceny of overcoat of W. T. Thompson at Hatch House. Deft testified that he did not intend to steal the coat, but that he took it by permission of a companion, who said it belonged to him; but this dodge would hardly go down with the jury, who returned a verdict of guilty.

State vs. Samuel Langley. Larceny of an overcoat from bar-room of the Oldtown Exchange. Defence, that his overcoat hung up beside it and he took the wrong coat by mistake; also that Deft was so drunk that he didn't know whether he took the coat or not; and the party prosecuting sold him the rum. Verdict, not guilty.

Stetson, Co. Att'y. Kimball.

—The Ladies' Levee in aid of the Freedmen comes off this evening at Norombega Hall, and we hope it will be fully attended. The object is one which commends itself to every heart that loves justice and believes in freedom and humanity. There will be many fine attractions for both young and old, and a very pleasant time is anticipated. Admittance only twenty cents—children half price.

The ladies who have had this levee in preparation have labored most zealously and faithfully, and every arrangement has been made to ensure a most pleasant entertainment. Refreshments have been provided in bountiful measure and in great variety, and the hall has been tastefully decorated. The tickets of admission, as above stated, have been put at a low figure, so that all may come. We would urge our people who desire to promote so good and worthy an object not to fail of attendance upon this occasion. Let the hall be filled in all its ample proportions.

NO PAPER TO-MORROW. A despatch last evening states that the Portland, and other western papers will not be issued this afternoon (it being the anniversary of Washington's Birthday) nor Friday morning. —General James J. Fessenden, son of Senator Fessenden, has accepted the position of Superintendent of the New England division of the National Express Company, of which General J. E. Johnston is President. His headquarters will be in Boston.

—We learn from The Hancock Journal that Richard Higgins of Trenton, has been appointed Light-house keeper at Winter Harbor, by Collector Thomas. Mr. Higgins served honorably in the 1st Maine Heavy Artillery, and was severely wounded while facing the enemy at Spottsylvania, Va.

—The municipal election in Portland takes place March 5th. In Bangor March 12th.

—A man in Auburn seventy-one years of age, stood two flour barrels on their heads, laid a stick across them, stood with his feet together and jumped free and clear over the stick. Smart old gentleman.

—An attempt is being made in Skowhegan to organize a Brass Band.

—The Ellsworth American says that Mr. G. P. Osgood of that village, while at work in the logging swamp last week, and exerting himself beyond the bounds of prudence, burst a varicose vein in the leg, and before medical assistance could be obtained came near bleeding to death.

—Capt. Wm. R. Smyth, of Brunswick, has been made Major by brevet by recommendation of Gen'l Grant, for meritorious services at the battle of Chickamauga.

—The new hotel at Norridgewock is to be opened with a grand ball on the 27th inst., as we learn from the Skowhegan Clarion.

—The Loyal Sunrise of Presque Isle is now printed in an enlarged form, and is a handsome as well as good paper. We wish Bro. Stickney may have the success which he so well deserves. He makes an independent and live paper, and an interesting one to his readers.

ONE OF THE MONARCHS. The Sunrise says that Mr. Henry Tilley's crew on No. 14, Range 4, cut and hauled at one load a pine tree, which measured at the stump 4 ft. 8 inches in diameter, 55 ft. long, scaled full size 3859 ft., equal to 9 tons 29 ft. It was scaled by Mr. Chadwick of Bangor.

—Messrs. Talbot, Rust & Co., of Rockport, have put in store 6000 tons of ice, the few past weeks. The prospect of the ice trade, the coming season is, is said, is not as good as our ice dealers were anticipating, owing to large quantities having been secured in the Middle States.—[Belfast Age.

—THE "SUPPOSED FLIGHT OF A BANK ROBBER." The Boston Journal says it is informed on good authority that the "supposition" of the Portland Press that the person who paid for a special passage to Portland the other day to take the steamer to Europe, was Howard, one of the Concord Bank robbers, is wholly erroneous. The gentleman who paid for the extra train was Mr. J. H. Shannon, of the firm of Shannon, Granger & Everett, of Chicago. He paid $100, not $300, for his ride.

—The Brunswick Telegraph, in speaking of the design of the Methodists to build a church in that village, says:—"The Catholics are in treaty for the purchase of the old building and lot which is held at $1500, and it is highly probable that they will secure it. We understand that $3000 have been subscribed by the Methodists and their friends towards the new building, so that if the old one is sold, $4500 will be available. It is stimated that $5000 will be required."

Snow. The heaviest fall of snow which has occurred this season, in this vicinity at least, was experienced here last week.—Eighteen inches on a level were added to our former stock, rendering travelling a very unpleasant business.—[Aroostook Pioneer.

We understand that the recent rain storms in this vicinity have been snow storms in the northern part of the State,—and that the snow is now four feet deep on the head waters of the Penobscot.

—A letter from Bothwell, C. W., published in the Lewiston Journal, says one quarter of the McKay farm, purchased a few weeks since by parties in Waterville, Biddeford and Lewiston, has just been sold at an advance of 250 per cent. in gold.—[Kennebec Journal.

We saw some of those lots sold, on the same day the above sale was effected, at an advance of 100 per cent. on the above rate.—[Oxford Democrat.

ELECTRICITY. During the prevalence of a snow squall this morning at half past twelve o'clock, the atmosphere was so completely charged with electricity that messages were transmitted between Boston and Portland, across the wires without the aid of a battery. Just before the appearance of the squall, the Northern Lights were unusually brilliant. Sparks of electricity were freely emitted from the instruments at the telegraph office in this city, and we are informed by the operator, Mr. Austin, that such a thing is of rare occurrence. Mr. A. also informs us that it is only during the appearance of the Northern Lights that the lines are ever affected in this manner, and but once before, some eight years since, does he remember messages to have been transmitted without the aid of the battery. It was a subject of much remark at the time, by the savans of the country, many theories being offered in elucidation of the mystery.—[Press.

—Aroostook soil is good, as Maine young men will find if they try it. George A. Richardson, of Eaton Grant, furnishes the Pioneer with the following account of its fertility:—

"He raised the past year on two and a half acres of land, one hundred and twenty-five bushels of oats; seventy-five of potatoes; twelve of rye; ten of barley; two of corn; two of beans; twenty-five of buckwheat; two of peas; two of oats and peas; five of turnips; forty cabbages, and other garden vegetables.

—In the passage from Hawthorne's Note Book, published in the Atlantic Monthly, he speaks of the Marshal of Maine—"a corpulent jolly fellow, famed for humor." The Marshal, whom Hawthorne saw a quarter of a century since, survives the brilliant author and though less corpulent, is quite as jolly. Albert Smith, little less celebrated than the Albert of Mont Blanc, is a resident of Boston.

—By new processes of extracting the gold from the quartz, the "dust," or "tailings," hitherto thrown away, is now made to pay forty dollars per ton. The gleaners after the miners will do better than the miners themselves in many instances.

—A tremendous fall of rain took place on the night of Feb. 12th. It poured all night. Many cellars of houses and stores were partially filled. The outlets of the drains were frozen up, hence the filling. S. W. Pope & Co., on Dublin street, had goods damaged in their cellar to the value of five or six hundred dollars.—[Machias Union.

MR. L. A. GODEY. The name of this gentleman has become a household word in New England from his long connection with the Lady's Book, which he has managed with great ability for more than a quarter of a century. His many friends will be gratified to hear that he proposes within a few weeks to obtain relaxation from his labors by a trip to Europe.

—Hon. Lewis Cass, who lives in Detroit and at last accounts was very feeble with but small hope of improvement, is about eighty-two years of age.

—A sensitive Dutchman committed suicide at New York, a few days ago, because he was so mortified that his cousin had come to this country and gone into business as a mule-driver.

—The Mississippi river is rising and pouring through the plantations near Baton Rouge. The great levee building there, under the State's management, has not been finished, and great loss is anticipated.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY. The March number of this first of American magazines is received, showing the following excellent table of contents:

Passages from Hawthorne's Note-Books—III; An Old Man's Idyl; A Ramble thro' the Market; The Freedman's Story—II; Nantucket; The Snow-Walkers; To Herza; An Amazonian Picnic; Doctor Johns—XIV; Communication with the Pacific; In the Sea; The Chimney-Corner for 1866—III; Poor Chloe; Snow; Griffith Gaunt, or Jealousy—IV; Reviews and Literary Notices:—Whittier's Snow-Bound—Winifred Bertram—Smiles's Lives of Watt and Boulton.

Perry's Moth and Freckle Lotion.
Chloasma, or Mothpatch, (also Liverspot,) and Lentigo, or Freckles, are often very annoying, particularly to ladies of light complexion; for the discolored spots show more plainly on the face of a blonde than a brunnette; but they greatly mar the beauty of either; and any preparation that will effectually remove them without injuring the texture or color of the skin, is certainly a desideratum. Dr. B. C. Perry, who has made diseases of the skin a specialty, has discovered a remedy for these discolorations, which is at once prompt, infallible and harmless.
Prepared only by B. C. PERRY, Dermatologist, No. 49 Bond Street, New York, and for sale by all druggists in Bangor, by Warren L. Alden. Wholesale Agent: Price $2.00 per bottle. Call for PERRY'S MOTH AND FRECKLE LOTION.

REPORT OF

Dr. Tefft's Lecture

ON

MAINE, and how to make the most of our own State.

DELIVERED IN THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, BREWER, THURSDAY EVE. FEB. 12, 1866.

[Reported for the Bangor Jeffersonian.]

On an average, not ten degrees north of the average latitude of the State of Maine, and twelve and a half degrees of the average latitude of New England, and within less than two degrees of the southern point of Greenland, there lies a reef of naturally barren country, not so large as Maine, and more than six times our wealth and population, possessing more people than the whole of the New England States together — Her power from her first appearance on the theater of nations has been marvelous She resisted every attempt of Cæsar and his victorious legions. The Norman conqueror met with no serious resistance till he set his foot on her borders when he was hurled from the land and was forced to seek a speedy peace with one whom no conqueror had ever mastered. She is at this moment a builder of ships to the first naval power of Europe, and her manufacturies are numerous, large and prosperous, giving occupation to nearly twice as many people as inhabit New Hampshire and Vermont Her agriculture is prosperous enough to feed her numerous people Having little timber and possessing little mineral wealth she depends upon her soil for bread. Her intellectual position is equal to that of the most favored nation of the globe Her common schools are good and her Colleges and Universaties are continually pouring out a population of the best educated talent Who has not heard of her philosophy, her literature and her science and of her great men in all departments of enterprise. Who is ignorant of her orators, and her poets, and her Statesmen There is scarcely a hamlet within her border that does not glory in the triumph of some of her gifted men. The soil is cultivated to the highest perfection and demonstrates the genius, enterprise and life of her citizens and the results of their labor on so rough, rugged and mountainous a country, draw forth the admiration of all mankind Scotland is wealthy where a less ambitious race would have starved, and teaches to other countries how to make the most of their scanty resources. She is the demonstration of what a northern region may become Such in few words, is the land of that remarkable people whose glory and civilization has streamed out and reached to the remotest confines of earth What is there or can there be to hinder the people of the State of Maine from building up another Scotland. We have a far more fertile country and it abounding in all the resources required for a flourishing and powerful State This was the question that thrust itself upon my mind during my first visit to the land of Robert Burns We have around us in our own State, resources out of which to make our State what we choose to have it Any country will always be what its people choose to make it. Every individual citizen is the artificer of his own fortune. We can all bear our part of the great work In every thrifty community there must be genius, enterprise, capital and labor and upon the hearty co-operation of all these depends the power, wealth and strength of a state or nation. Genius is the power which sees changes of doing things never done before A man of genius will pass over a country where for centuries people have been living and laboring for a scanty living and will transform it into a garden. Here, says he, is a morass, producing nothing but tadpoles and frogs, but beneath all this I behold a beautiful plantation, teeming with verdure and freshness. He digs into it, drains off the water, works over it and soon his plantation comes up to view in all its richness Soon it becomes productive, he gets rich and becomes one of the solid men of the community. In the working of his land he will not consent always to run in the steps of his fathers but substitutes machine for hand labor and his plantation becomes a fixed thing, an agricultural institute and an example to all the farmers far and near because he has found out how to do old things in a new way, and how to transform a morass into a fruitful field Another man of genius drives or rides through a rich and productive country, the inhabitants of which have been in the habit of sending away the materials produced by them to a far off country there to be manufactured and at great expense returned to them again for their own use. He sees a large and beautiful stream winding its way among the hills and tumbling along the rocks from one steep to another and he hears the people complain that this should be so full of rocks and that its bed should be so uneven as to completely ruin navigation. What a blessing is this tumbling water, cries this man of genius. On this foaming water I will build a dam on which I will erect a score of mills, and the products of the country shall here be manufactured and sent into all the world He goes to work and soon a city springs into being on the river banks as if by magic and almost before any one is aware what is going on

Again, wearied with constant application and the toils of the brain, he takes his rifle and fishing tackle and starts off for a little recreation. He wanders through the dense forest, and over rough mountains, crossing numerous rivers and streams, till all at once, he emerges into an open, clear country, rich in natural resources of every character, producing large crops, and in the bosom of whose soil lies untold wealth in the shape of iron and coal mines, and slate quarries, but shut in from the outside world by naturally wild, rough and almost impassible country. Now the man of genius says, what simpletons these poor people are, having in abundance so much of the good things of this life, materials so much needed in the community from which I came, and yet neither they nor the others can see how both may become wealthy by simply connecting the two by cutting a canal, or laying down a line of iron rails between them. Thus inland country shall be developed and its resources brought to the seaboard and both shall be filled with wealth and thrift all from a single thread of communication between the two localities. Population and travel would then increase. A spirit of enterprise would fill the people, the undertaking would begin to pay and with the land teeming with this idea, convincing the people that there was money in it, the work goes forward; the wildness would be cleared up and a seeming miracle would burst upon their view. Without genius to find out the way for us, the world would be to-day where it was when under the reign of rude barbarism. Yet such men are called by some, fanatics, idle talkers and dreamers. They are slandered and ridiculed because their ways are not like other peoples ways. They are not appreciated by people generally, till they are taken away from us. Columbus was not appreciated in his day; neither was Gallaleo but when they are gone, and we look around vain for others to fill their places, we then begin to fell their loss, and rear huge monuments to their memory as high as Babel; and publish their names to posterity as public benefactors It were far better to heed their teachings while living

But these men of genius are not always men of enterprise This class is a class of deeds They are not known for their power of making known ways for prosperity, but are the men to take hold of an enterprise after it has been mapped out, and engineer it through, They are men of intelligence and spirit They cannot bear the policy of standing still, holding their hands and waiting, Micawber like, for "something to turn up" Their passion is to make things turn up and turn over. They are always at their post at work at some useful project. They are a most important class of citizens and are employed in stirring the world up to some new and important undertaking They are starring men and whenever a prospect is open to them of doing a work of general utility they are not idle but say to others, "come neighbors, here is a good work, let us take hold and do it," and they will give the world no rest till the enterprise is undertaken. One true genius will furnish work for several hundred of these men, but it could not do well without them Some will not listen to them because they were not the first to propose the idea. Others think they are acting from selfish motives, for being supremely selfish themselves, it is impossible for them to understand how it is possible for any one to undertake any great enterprise without having selfishness at the bottom. They cannot see how another can do a thing from any different motives than those which govern them

But no enterprise can be successful without capital. A State may produce any amount of genius and this may be followed by enterprise but nothing can be done without the wealth of the country. There must be these men who have the ready money And the class of capitalists is as essential as the two former classes to the prosperity of the State. But the most wealthy men are not always those who the most readily take hold of a new work They want first to be sure that it will pay them well in dollars and cents The first work has to be done by men of comparatively small means and in general it is better for any community to have its surplus wealth distributed rather than to have it concentrated in a few persons Men of moderate means are generally more liberal than the rich and the burden of a new enterprise which is to benefit a community falls on them The rich are apt to stand back till their less forward neighbors have commenced and gone as far as they could, and then when they have expended then all and reduced themselves to penury they will take the work as it is for little or nothing and finishing it add still more to their already accumulated wealth They care not a copper for what the community says or thinks of them They are waiting till the work which is doubling the value of their possessions shall come to grief and then they will step in and take hold of the tottering enterprise and make themselves rich by getting the benefit of what better men than they have lost

Men who thus hold back in every good work, waiting to rob their neighbors, only deserve our utmost contempt They be in wait to catch the unfortunate and make their gains by preying on other peoples losses You will see these men everywhere, plying their dreadful business by marking every man they see to find out what he is worth, and when a convenient time comes they will pounce upon him, cut him up and dispose of every slice of him as easily and conscientiously as they would their dinner They are the vile reptiles that strike then innocent victims without a rattle or a hiss They are vultures that would rob the grave of its dead to satisfy the low cravings of hunger and would then whet their dirty beaks against the gravestones And yet they think that the community respects them They are self deceived, good for nothing, shallow creatures Could they but know how they are despised by all, they would carry their heads much lower than they do They are the robbers of every man's right to competence and wealth. They are mere sepulchres, that engulf their fellow citizens in one common ruin. They add not a penny to the general wealth, but make their money by compelling other people to lose

Honor the man who with what means he has, is ready to help every good enterprise that comes along He is not obliged to go into everything he is asked to He may weigh the matter first and speculate as to the feasibility of its prospect of success and of his means to undertake it This is his duty, but it is equally his duty to be alive to such new ideas as are constantly rising up about him Every dollar of his money should be devoted to some work the natural result of which shall be to make business for more people and to bring out of nature something which has not been brought out before The soil, the air, the sea are full of wealth — They only need to be brought out The Mexicans lived for centuries in California, in poverty and pauperism, not knowing the mine of wealth there was beneath them, and it was not till American enterprise searched the soil that its untold riches were brought forth We have riches here in the cold and uncomfortable State of Maine, and it only needs that we shall put our enterprise and capital at work in hunting up and bringing it out to the light. It has been said that he is a public benefactor who makes two spires of grass to grow where only one grew before. It is our duty to create two enterprises where there was but one before, and if the capital of Maine were thus employed we should soon behold a picture of prosperity that would do us good to look upon.

Lastly comes labor. Not last because least but last in the classification It has three requisites, intelligence, skill and honesty These are the three things demanded of every man who labors for another person, and on all these respects the American laborer stands above that of every other country in the world. The common school has made the humblest son of toil a thinker. In workmanship he is not to be surpassed. He is thought by many to be inferior to the foreign manufacturer, but it is not so. Give him a job to do and the pay for doing it and the result will prove that we need not go abroad for a perfect article. They are better citizens than the laborers of Europe They are native born and have learned from the open Bible the beauty of the golden rule And this one fact has more godliness in it than we can dig from the richest Eldorado in the world.

Our soil is full of mineral wealth Our forests are full of timber, and our ships are the finest built in the world No finer ones are built anywhere than in the State of Maine and on our Penobscot river.

There is no doubt but we have among us a good number of each of the four classes of men just mentioned as necessary to the development of our northern State, and under the combined efforts of these classes, we are making visible progress, but we are not progressing as fast as we might and ought to do. We are not advancing like some of the middle and western States. Can we lift our finger and put it on the spot where the trouble lies? The great evil in our State is our lack of faith. Nothing can be done in this world without faith. No man can succeed in any enterprise without faith in himself, and faith in his work. This is the great evil in this State As a general thing we do not believe that our State is capable of becoming one of the leading States of this great republic. Why, it is too cold, too rocky, too mountainous, too barren, to become a first class State. We have not tried it As yet, compared with the most northern States of Europe, we know nothing about farming We have no farming here. Our farmers are not farmers exclusively but in addition are blacksmiths, carpenters, shoemakers and perhaps some of them occasionally do a little preaching. They are into all sorts of business except their own. We are not testing the soil that God has given us. Instead of enriching it year by year and taking from it large crops we are satisfied with what scanty crops the soil gives us, and are impoverishing it year after year And yet our farmers are constantly grumbling about the poor soil of our own State, and are telling their children of the rich soil and bountiful harvest of the prairie West and sunny South

They do not however, tell them of the drawbacks, of the low price of their products, of the chills and fever, the swamp miasma, and the cursing blight of slavery It is distance that lends enchantment to the view. They have never been there themselves and know nothing about it. Nothing is said of the lack of schools and of good society. Nothing is said of the disadvantages These children, therefore, learn in their early life to despise their own country, and their fathers clinch their own argument by their own mean way of farming We have no advantages, our fathers have told us, till we believe them. Do not believe one solitary word of it, have faith in the State of Maine, and your faith would grow the more you traveled abroad There is as much here that a man requires in this life to make him comfortable as there is anywhere under the sun In the West and South a farmer can raise more bushels of grain but not so much money Crops are more abundant but markets further off and not so good, and do not pay so well for the same investments in capital and labor.

The lecturer then gave a little of his western experience in farming which was in this wise

"While living in the western country I had a pet patch of corn of about ten acres I bestowed much care and labor on it and had really a fine piece Some of the stalks were 16 feet in height (I measured it and want you to believe it) About harvest time I was taken ill and sent for the doctor. After he had prescribed for me I asked him what I had better do with my corn 'Well, I don't know,' said he, 'it is hardly worth gathering, there is so much in the country and it is so cheap You had better turn your cattle into the field and get your neighbors to do the same, (that is, those of them who haven't pasture ground enough of their own of the same sort,) and let them eat all the corn they can Then turn in your hogs and let your neighbors turn in theirs and they will eat the stalks and roots and leave you ground all clean' This being the best thing I could do, I did it, and my pet ten acres paid me twenty-four dollars When you sigh for the cheap prices of western lands and the abundant crops, just remember my pet ten acre lot"

Here we can raise less bushels but more dollars A man can realize as much here over his expenditures by proper management as in the richest part of the Mississippi valley Here he has health, is educated at his own school and enjoys his own religion He has no fever and ague and is almost sure of good health, and as a general rule it is much better for a man to remain living in the State where nature has placed him It is better for every son of Maine to remain in the State than to go to any other country on the globe Our people do not generally believe this fact Maine is one of the best States to emigrate to of any in the Union We can make Maine superior in an agricultural point of view We can raise peaches here in the open air Grapes will grow here too, and in great abundance. We can raise much more corn than we do. Canada, which is much farther north than we are, raises some of the best apples and grain on the continent Our crops grow where they bring the highest prices, being close to a market where there is a ready sale. We live in the midst of the best civilization Let us then study our position and resources, and our faith will soon grow strong and will work out for us such miracles as will gladden our eyes. Then, too, we have a very extensive range of seacoast which has heretofore served us only for the purpose of carrying away our lumber But our lumber will soon be gone. We must then turn more attention to the soil, pull the stumps out of it and enrich it, not impoverish it and send from all our sea ports corn and grain and other natural products of the country which we can raise in such abundance!

Besides, we are blessed with broad rivers and large streams, and fought to be one of the first manufacturing States of the Union This done and trade would turn in this direction and we should become a great commercial State Were our men of capital and enterprise to employ the means at their command, we might easily demonstrate that you have been listening this evening to no fancy sketch, no more whimsical ideas, but the simple truth Our Legislature should take the matter in hand The men composing it should be men of genius and enterprise—men who should forget the petty squabbles of party and devote their time to the more noble purposes of promoting the growth and wealth of the State. They should be men of positive ideas of progress, and who can express them in clear, convincing terms Each city and town should have its committee or exchange of citizens whose business it should be to look after the interests of the place and develope its resources. Then there should be agricultural and mechanical schools and public lectures and by these means the public mind should be kept on the alert.

We are told that one hinderance to the realization of our ideas lies in the fact of our small population. It is wonderful what a perpetual stream of our young men are pouring out of the state to other fields of labor, never to return to the land that gave them birth. Nor is the tide of emigration ceasing, nor will it cease till we do something to keep those at home. Something must be done to give them employment and interest them, and make but people to remain where they were designed to dwell. Prove to our farmers that farming can be made as profitable here as elsewhere and they will stay. Prove to our young mechanics that they can do as well here as in New York or Massachusetts and they will not remove but will linger here among us. Make the students of learning return by encouraging them in their professions and by giving them such attentions as men of genius always crave, and they will live with us forever. Let us do what we can to make all feel at home and we shall soon have enough of population and that too of native growth There is no trouble in getting a population, the only trouble is in keeping it and feeding it. Let a new mill, a new forge, or any other new enterprise be started in a place and you would see how the people flock to it for employment. It is work—enterprise that is to keep our people from leaving. Let the capital we have be drawn from speculation and be devoted to tilling the soil, to mining, and to manufacturing, and we shall not only keep what population we have but we shall draw others from every state and from every country of the globe. If the man who makes two spires of grass to grow where only one grew before is a public benefactor, then he who makes two enterprises to grow where only one grew before performs a much more important mission This is the only way to do it. Let us in a word but make another Scotland of the State of Maine and our borders will be more and more crowded with people as we progress in our glorious work Let our streams be employed in working up our own raw material. Let us turn our attention to the fullest development of our own resources and we shall soon have population enough for our purpose.

We can also make ours a land of beauty as pleasant to the eye as a painted picture Let us improve the landscape which a bounteous nature has given us Let every man's farm or home be rendered beautiful Let every man's house be neat, well built, well fenced and painted with trees and hedges well trimmed and trained Let the pulpit, the school house and the press combine and mould our institutions If these things are done our population would increase. Men of genius would find encouragement to come and live among you Laboring men seeing your enterprise would rush here to do your work Our destinies are in our own hands Our state will be what its inhabitants make it We have had to take things as we find them and conform ourselves to our condition of soil and climate and with a just use of what is in our power, we may make of our state another Scotland

DR KNIGHTS ORIENTAL HAIR RESTORER, after a few applications, restores grey or faded hair to its original color, and is the only preparation of the kind upon which the public can place any reliance It has never been known to fail in a single instance, and is totally unlike the thousand and one so-called Hair Restorers, by which so many have been egregiously deceived.
